SCHERING-PLOUGH CORPORATION'S MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER

Finally, Complaint Counsel has already conducted extensive discovery of individuals who actually have knowledge and information about events relevant to the case. Thus, deposing Poorvin and Dilascia would provide no conceivable benefit. Given the witnesses lack of involvement in the issues in this case, the limited possible use of their testimony and the fact that Complaint Counsel has already obtained relevant information from individuals with knowledge of the events at issue, subjecting Poorvin and Dilascia -- a third party -- to examination is overly

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF SCHERING-PLOUGH CORPORATION'S MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

Respondent Schering-Plough Corporation ("Schering") moves pursuant to 16 C.F.R. §§ 3.31(c) & (d) for a protective order preventing Complaint Counsel from taking the depositions of David Poorvin, Schering's Vice-President of Worldwide Licensing, and Chris Dilascia, a former Schering employee. Neither had any involvement in the settlement or license agreements at issue. Neither is listed on any party's witness list, nor are they proper or necessary rebuttal witnesses. As such, respondent respectfully requests a protective order to protect the deponents and parties from these unnecessary, burdensome and unjustified depositions at this late date.

II. ARGUMENT

This Court has the power to issue a protective order to "protect a party or other person from . . . undue burden" or where the "burden . . . of the proposed discovery outweigh its likely benefit." 16 C.F.R. §§ 3.31(c)(1)(iii) & (d). Here, a protective order is appropriate to prevent Schering and the two proposed witnesses from burdensome depositions that will provide minimal benefit to complaint counsel.

Complaint Counsel already deposed the six individuals complaint counsel viewed as primarily involved in the licensing and settlement agreements -- Messrs. Kapur, Lauda, Driscoll, Audibert, Hoffman and Wasserstein -- in the pre-complaint investigative stage of the case. In the complaint stage, Complaint Counsel has already deposed five of these individuals for a second time, and by the close of discovery, will have deposed all six. Additionally, Complaint Counsel has deposed fifteen other Schering individuals, including cumulative examinations of six members of Schering's Board of Directors. Complaint Counsel has also noticed the deposition of six other individuals it intends to depose, not including Mr. DiLascia and Mr. Poorvin, Significantly, neither Poorvin nor Dilascia had any involvement in the settlement or license agreements. It comes as no surprise then that during the extensive discovery had to date, Complaint Counsel never showed any interest in Poorvin or Dilascia. Indeed, Complaint Counsel never even sought to speak with Poorvin or Dilascia in the investigative stage of the case, much less seek to depose either of them. The reason quite frankly is that Complaint Counsel has already identified and thoroughly examined, some of them multiple times, all key individuals with any knowledge of the agreements at issue. As such, deposing these witnesses is unlikely to provide any significant additional benefit to complaint counsel, especially given the number of depositions and the over 100 boxes of document are produced by Schering in this matter.

That the proposed depositions of Poorvin and Dilascia will provide minimal benefit is also shown by the fact that neither is listed on any party's witness list. Pursuant to the Scheduling Order, the parties submitted their revised witness lists on September 20, 2001. No party can designate additional witnesses "unless good cause is shown." Second Revised Scheduling Order at 2. It is difficult to imagine how Complaint Counsel could establish good cause to identify Poorvin and Dilascia as potential witnesses at this late date. Good cause "demands a demonstration that the existing schedule [for identification of witnesses] cannot reasonably be met despite due diligence of the party seeking the extension." Carrizales v. City of Omaha, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19387, *3 (D. Neb. Jan. 19, 2000) (internal quotations omitted). Complaint Counsel cannot meet that burden here, given that Complaint Counsel has been well aware of both Poorvin and Dilascia and their positions at Schering since Schering's document productions during the pre-complaint investigative phase of the case – almost two years ago. See SP 23 00037, SP 23 00065 (produced in response to Complaint Counsel's request of November 5, 1999); SPCID 00090 (produced in response to Complaint Counsel's request of April 13, 2000); SPCID2 1A 00056 (Produced in response to Complaint Counsel's request of August 18, 2000). Furthermore, Complaint Counsel's own expert identified Poorvin in his report months ago. See Levy Report at 14. Despite same, Complaint Counsel has waited until the twelfth hour to depose an individual whom Complaint Counsel's own expert describes as "not [being] involved at all with the licensing of Niacor-SR." Id.

Schering informed Complaint Counsel of Poorvin's and Dilascia's lack of Here, Complaint Counsel clearly knew of, or could have anticipated, in advance of the deadline for submission of revised witness lists, any limited use it might have for Poorvin's and Dilascia's testimony. Complaint Counsel has stated to counsel for Schering that it intends to use Dilascia's testimony to rebut Schering's argument that it does not have monopoly power in the relevant market. However, Complaint Counsel bears the burden of proof with respect to market definition and monopolization, and thus it surely anticipated, prior to the deadline for the identification of witnesses, the need to present factual testimony with respect to the relevant product market.

Furthermore, given the fact that Complaint Counsel has already taken over a dozen depositions of individuals who actually do possess knowledge of relevant events, any information that deponents theoretically possess would be, at best, cumulative and unnecessary. Therefore, subjecting the deponents to examination is burdensome both to the individual deponents and to the parties, and would provide no material benefit. This burden is exacerbated by the fact that no cognizable benefit can come from permitting the noticed depositions – their testimony would likely be inadmissible at the hearing, since Complaint Counsel has not identified Poorvin or Dilascia on its revised witness list and these individuals are not proper rebuttal witnesses. The Court therefore should issue a protective order since the
