DISCUSSION

Respondents' Opposition demonstrates that an Order striking the alleged defenses is appropriate in the circumstances of this case. As discussed below, the Opposition is fraught with legal issue that should be certified to the Commission," Opp'n at 10, even though this issue purportedly "fall[s] within the sole province of Article III courts." Id. Certification to the Commission would serve little purpose if the Commission lacked authority to rule on the issue. Respondents' contentions here are unsupported by citation to any authority, and are erroneous. Both the Court and the Commission may rule on constitutional and APA issues.⁴

Respondents also argued that the Motion to Strike is beyond the Court's authority because on grounds of due process, the First Amendment, or the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 551 et seq. ("APA"). Respondents' arguments to the contrary are incorrect.

	II. Respondents' "Controlling Line of Precedent" Does Not Validate their Defenses
	In their Opposition, Respondents offered several new permutations of their alleged _	constitutional defenses. First, they stated that the "overriding issue" is that due process requires persons who loiter or wander on the streets to provide a "credible and reliable" identification, and to account for their presence when questioned by an officer. 461 U.S. at 353, cited in Opp'n at

14. Respondents contend that the Kolender decision, and others in their "controlling line," and (r)(5)(D) and comparing FDA statutory framework to FTC law). 7 Pearson is not "controlling," and it cannot resuscitate Respondents' invalid defenses. If the decisions of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit will control on appeal, as Respondents appear to suggest, see Opp'n at 14, then Respondents have not shown haw their defences can augreed in light of a decision from the D.C Cinarit Alex in discrete factual context very different from the present case, so their holdings are inapposite.¹¹ However, the general legal principles discussed in the lead decision cited in Respondents' Opposition, the Appalachian Power Co. decision, may be instructive. The Appalachian Power Co. court stated:

In the administrative setting, "two conditions must be satisfied for agency action to be 'final': First, the action must mark the 'consummation' of the agency's decisionmaking process—it must not be of a merely tentative or interlocutory nature. And second, the action must be one by which 'rights or obligations have been determined,' or from which 'legal consequences will flow.'"

208 F.3d at 1022 (citations omitted).

Applying these precents to the present case neither the Commission's adoption of an advertising substantiation standard nor the staff's use of that standard before the filing of the Complaint has "mark[ed] the 'consummation' of the agency's decisionmaking process." id as

B. Respondents' Additional First Amendment Arguments Are Invalid

Complaint Counsel have already discussed Respondents' First Amendment argument based on FDA caselaw. Respondents maintain, however, that they have a valid First Amendment defense to "the FTC's substantiation doctrine" because the substantiation requirement, or the

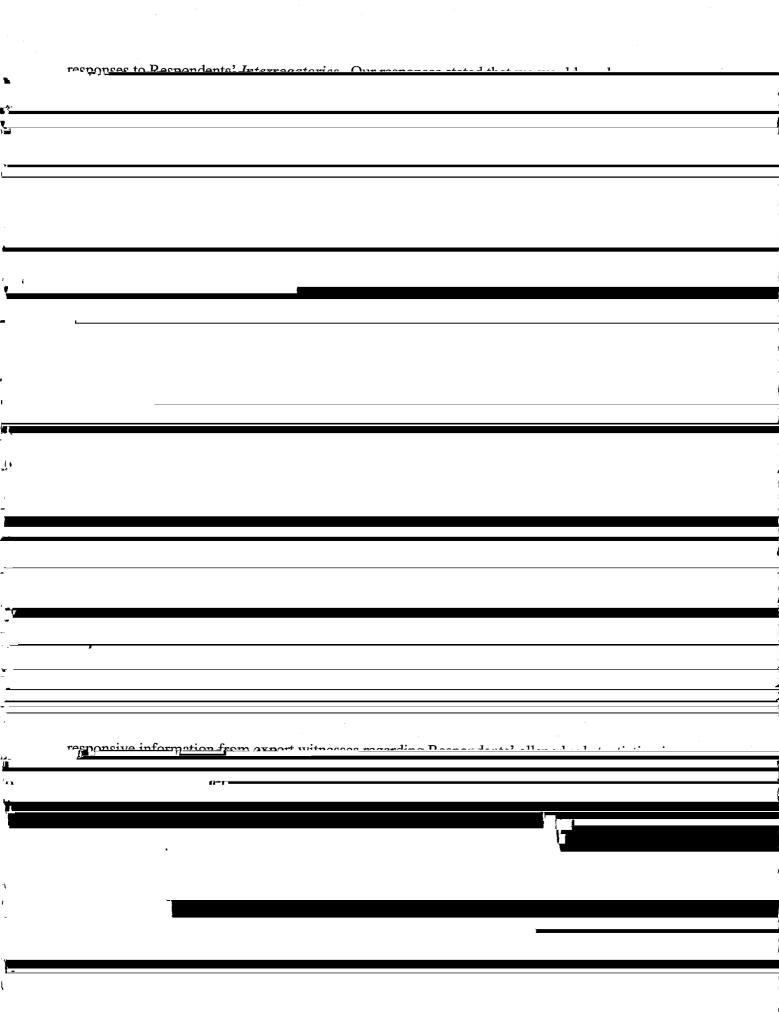

does not protect false or deceptive commercial speech.¹⁷

At the outset, the Court should strike Respondents' alleged First Amendment defense to the false claims alleged in the Complaint. See Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26, 32, 41, 43. The Complaint alleges that Respondents made false establishment claims and falsely represented that
