

3. Respondents develop, advertise, sell, license, and distribute various software products, including "InternetALERT." InternetALERT is software that monitors Internet traffic entering a consumer's computer and provides alerts when an attacker attempts to access the computer from the Internet without the consumer's knowledge or permission. InternetALERT is offered for sale, sold, distributed, and licensed by respondents primarily through respondents' Web site www.bonzi.com at the price of $49 for a one-year subscription.

4. Respondents promote InternetALERT software on the Internet through banner, button, and pop-up ads, which, when clicked, transfer consumers to one of several Web pages advertising the software. These click-through Web pages, or landing pages, link to the respondents' Web site www.bonzi.com, where consumers can download InternetALERT from the Internet. Respondents also promote the software during the software's installation process.

5. Respondents have disseminated, or have caused to be disseminated, banner, button, and pop-up advertisements for the InternetALERT software, including, but not limited to, those attached as Exhibits A through C:

8. Data enter and exit a computer connected to the Internet by using gateways known as communications ports. These ports enable a computer to establish connections to other computers and to exchange data and are used to handle common network services, such as Web browser or email client services. Ports that are being used are “open” and “listening” for communications, for different periods of time, depending on the type of service they are handling at the time. Internet attackers seek to identify which ports are open on a computer through “port scanning” or other techniques, and may be able to enter a computer from the Internet by using one of a computer’s open ports.

9. InternetALERT monitors and provides alerts to consumers on certain communications ports concerning unauthorized access to a computer. InternetALERT automatically monitors and alerts consumers on unauthorized communications.

14. The acts and practices of respondents as alleged in this complaint constitute unfair or deceptive acts or practices in or affecting commerce in violation of Section 5(a) of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

THEREFORE, the Federal Trade Commission this seventh day of October, 2004, has issued this complaint against respondents.

By the Commission.
