publicly a document that had been redacted by blackening out text electronically in a manner which allowed the trade secret information to be viewed. Gelson's argues that it should not be required to provide information that Gelson's considers to be confidential without a protective order that prohibits the FTC from disclosing such information. Gelson's asserts that the protective order should contain an adequate disincentive that would require the disclosing party to pay a penalty for any violation of the protective order.

Respondent submits that the Protective Order in this case does adequately protect confidential documents of third parties. The Protective Order allows disclosure of confidential documents to a limited group of people and prohibits any Whole Foods employees, including inside counsel, from reviewing confidential documents subject to the Protective Order.

Commission agree to pay damages in the event of an inadvertent public disclosure of confidential information. Respondent also submits that, in the event the Protective Order is violated, Gelson's can raise the issue with the Commission.
