any consumer can learn and use Defendants' strategy to earn income without significant investable capital or free time, and Defendants' instructors have amassed substantial wealth by trading in the financial markets.

C. The FTC has sufficiently demonstrated that the Corporate Defendants and Defendant Eyal Shachar have used standardized refund agreements to inhibit customers' ability to post negative reviews about Defendants and their services or communicate with law enforcement agencies and others about Defendants and their services.

D. There is good cause to believe that Defendants have engaged in and are likely to engage in acts or practices that violate Section 5(a) of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45(a), that the Corporate Defendants and Defendant Shachar have engaged in and are likely to engage in acts or practices that violate the CRFA, 15 U.S.C. § 45b, and that Plaintiff is therefore likely to prevail on the merits of this action.

E. As demonstrated by documentation of Defendants' advertisements and live sales events, documents and information provided by Defendants, testimony and declarations from Defendants' former employees, consumer declarations, data regarding the trading performance of Defendants' customers, data regarding the loan repayment of Defendants' customers, and the additional documentation filed by the FTC, the FTC has established a likelihood of success in showing that Defendants have: (1) made false or unsubstantiated claims regarding consumers' ability to earn substantial income, including consumers' ability to do so even if they lacked significant time or investable capital; and (2) used standardized contract provisions that unlawfully inhibit customers' ability to review and share information about Defendants and their services with law enforcement agencies and others.

F. This Order, which restricts Defendants from making misleading claims, is not an improper prior restraint on speech.

G. The FTC has sufficiently demonstrated that Corporate Defendants are a common enterprise. The Corporate Defendants are commonly owned and controlled by Defendant Eyal Shachar and share office space. They also intermingle finances and operate for a common purpose. The FTC has established a likelihood of success in showing that the Corporate Defendants should be held liable for each others' deceptive acts and practices.

H. The FTC has sufficiently demonstrated that the Individual Defendants controlled the Corporate Defendants, directly participated in their deceptive conduct, and had knowledge of or at least were recklessly indifferent as to wrongdoing.

I. There is good cause to believe that immediate and irreparable harm will result from Defendants' ongoing violations of the FTC Act and the CRFA unless Defendants are restrained and enjoined by order of this Court.

J. There is good cause to believe that immediate and irreparable damage to the Court's ability to grant effective final relief for consumers – including monetary restitution, rescission, disgorgement, or refunds –will occur from the sale, transfer, destruction, or other disposition or concealment by Defendants of their assets or records, unless Defendants are immediately restrained and enjoined by order of this Court.

K. Good cause exists for appointing an independent monitor over the Monitored Entities, freezing the Corporate Defendants' assets, requiring preservation of the Individual Defendants' assets, and permitting the Plaintiff and the Monitor to take expedited discovery.

L. Weighing the equities and considering Plaintiff's likelihood of ultimate success on the merits, a preliminary injunction with an asset freeze, the appointment of a monitor, expedited discovery, and other equitable relief is in the public interest.
